

2015 End-of-year, Family Update Letter from The Greenwoods

I found this nifty paper with a winter background and I'm going to use it, by golly! Buckle up for the family year in review.

Joshua: In May he graduated from high school - or should we say that Sheila graduated to having no more home schooled children. He went along with Sheila and I to do his first whitewater rafting in July while in Colorado for Cru's biennial staff conference. He really liked it and we even tried to schedule a second, more advanced trip, while there, but without an advance reservation it was hopeless at that time of year. Two days after we got home he went to Hong Kong to work with Operation Mobilization on their ship, the Logos Hope for 10 days. He is attending community college this year, with intentions to go to Northern Arizona University next year. In September he began working at Pieology, a pizza restaurant which makes personal pizzas to order, kind of like when you get a sandwich at Subway. He started as a shift leader and enjoys the extra responsibility.

Caleb: Has one more semester at Northern Arizona University and is scheduled to graduate in May with a mixed degree in Psychology, Philosophy, and Religious Studies. Last year he moved back down from Flagstaff to an apartment near the ASU campus in Tempe because he was driving down here so often for his work he figured it would be less driving to schedule his classes on one day and make the trip up to Flag and back every Wednesday. He is a co-owner of a video company which specializes in projecting speakers onto large screens at seminars. This takes him to California frequently for weekend events. He also does side projects of video recording live events locally - many of which are recitals for a dance school. It has been fun to work with him occasionally to fill in on these jobs when he is out of town working a seminar.

intentions to go to Northern Arizona University next year. In September he began working at Pieology, a pizza restaurant which makes personal pizzas to order, kind of like when you get a sandwich at Subway. He started as a shift leader and enjoys the extra responsibility.

Caleb: Has one more semester at Northern Arizona University and is scheduled to graduate in May with a mixed degree in Psychology, Philosophy, and Religious Studies. Last year he moved back down from Flagstaff to an apartment near the ASU campus in Tempe because he was driving down here so often for his work he figured it would be less driving to schedule his classes on one day and make the trip up to Flag and back every Wednesday. He is a co-owner of a video company which specializes in projecting speakers onto large screens at seminars. This takes him to California frequently for weekend events. He also does side projects of video recording live events locally - many of which are recitals for a dance school. It has been fun to work with him occasionally to fill in on these jobs when he is out of town working a seminar.

Hannah: Is still enjoying being the Human Resources manager for two Chick-fil-a stores locally; which involves, among other things, the training of all the employees at both locations. In June she adopted a kitten who was left in a friend's back yard. As you read this she is most likely at the Urbana Student Missions Conference in St. Louis which runs the week after Christmas.

Sheila: Continues to volunteer with the Childrens' Ministries at church. She enjoyed visiting Turkey in November, accompanying our church's Director of Global Outreach to visit eight of the worker families our church supports around the country.

Craig: The big news about him is that after 33 years working with the Andre Kole Ministry of Cru (formerly Campus Crusade for Christ) Andre's office is closing its doors. He is intending to transfer to the Bridges ministry to work with international students at Arizona State University - still under the umbrella of Cru. He continues to co-lead the teaching of 2nd-5th grade children's Sunday school and enjoys being an active volunteer with the church's tech team.

That is the highlights about us this year. If we haven't heard from you in a while, we certainly would like to. Drop us a note or give us a call.

Wishing you all the best that God has for you in the new year,

Craig and Sheila

Craig and Sheila Greenwood – 1611 W El Monte, Chandler, AZ 85224 – 480-786-6527
craig.greenwood@cru.org – sheila.greenwood@cru.org – www.greenwoodministry.info